Congenital malformations of the portal system occur in both adults and neonates. Splenic vein thrombosis in neonates is an uncommon complication of portal hypertension due to a variety of causes. A three month-old female infant was referred to the emergency room for abdominal distention and hematemesis. At the time of admission, the infant was asymptomatic with a large right upper quadrant mass. Radiological studies demonstrated a large mass in the right upper quadrant, and a portal vein hypoplasia (portal vein diameters were 20 and 15 mm in the transverse and anteroposterior diameters, respectively). An upper gastrointestinal study revealed a large filling defect in the fundus of the stomach. An exploratory laparotomy revealed a large cyst-like tumor in the right upper quadrant of the abdomen with superior mesenteric vein thrombosis. Histopathologic evaluation demonstrated a cyst wall lining of smooth muscle cells and a spindle-shaped endothelial cell layer. This case is a unique developmental anomaly in a three month-old infant, who presented with portal vein hypoplasia with splenic vein thrombosis.
