1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image data processing system and method for generating image data based on an image reading result. 2. Description of the Related Art As a method of reading an image of an original document by use of a scanner, for example, there is known a method of obtaining line images of each line of an original document by moving a scanner unit by one line in one direction while moving the original document in the other direction, so as to read an image of the original document by linking the line images. In the above method, while the line images of the original document are linked, a long scanning time is required. In view of this problem, a method is proposed in which a plurality of reading lines (for example, three lines) are read at the same time, so that an image can be read in a short scanning time. In a case of generating image data for a high-resolution image from a short-resolution image of which a part thereof is overlapped, the short-resolution image is generated by thinning lines corresponding to a high-resolution image in the short-resolution image to be generated. If, however, the short-resolution image is generated by thinning the lines at a thinning rate determined by a main scanning line of the scanner unit, there occurs a difference of the thinning rate at a position in the short-resolution image generated from the long-resolution image. If the difference of the thinning rate occurs in the generated short-resolution image, there arises a problem that the image obtained by connecting the thinned lines becomes an erroneous image that is different in density from a normal image. A method of suppressing the difference of the thinning rate at the thinning of the lines is proposed in Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. Hei 10-213365, in which first thinning is performed at the thinning of the lines, and then the thinning is repeated 3e33713323
