Abu Hamza al-Masri (المصري) Abū Ḥamza al-ʿĀmṣīr is an Egyptian citizen whose execution was widely publicized after he was captured in Afghanistan in September 2004. He was the founder of al Qaeda. He was previously a professional practicing dentist. Abu Hamza al-Masri is the son of Ṣayyid ʿUmar bin ʿUmar al-Masri, a former field commander for the Egyptian Islamic Jihad who was killed in the Egyptian-Yugoslav war of the 1980s. According to the United States Department of State, Hamza was born in 1977 in Asyut, in Upper Egypt. Al-Masri claimed to be 30 years old, but several reports indicate that he was younger than that. According to Newsweek, he was born in 1976; the US Department of State lists his birth date as July 22, 1978. Al-Masri earned an undergraduate degree in the field of dentistry, graduating in Egypt from Cairo University in 1995. He entered Saudi Arabia and trained in Islamic jurisprudence and religious teaching. He is reported to have been a resident of the Shabwa Region of Yemen, where al Qaeda has had a significant presence for some time. In June 2002, al-Masri was expelled from Yemen, apparently for assistance he gave the Iraqis in their operations against U.S. forces during the early stages of the Iraq War. He then moved on to Peshawar, Pakistan, where he was among a group of al Qaeda operatives who attended a meeting with Osama bin Laden. At the time, he appears to have been the only Egyptian there. He joined al Qaeda, gaining a master's degree in Muslim jurisprudence, and left Peshawar for Afghanistan, where he was welcomed by al Qaeda's leader, Osama bin Laden. Capture and death On September 29, 2004, American Delta Force special forces units raided an al Qaeda training camp, on a farm near the town of Khost, eastern Afghanistan. They captured Abu Hamza al-Masri in the farmhouse where he was eating breakfast and served him with a Miranda warning, and an hour later, a Pakistani tribal chief helped them seal the area as they kept him in custody. During interrogation by Pakistani interrogators, al-Masri
