What's new:

Wednesday, December 23, 2012 I do have a disclaimer before I give you the official description. Skitter.com is run by the person that makes Pia from the Disney movie, Descendants! Her name is Pia (Shhh! Don't tell her I said that!). She is the woman that is always back at the restaurant with the diner. Since I have known Pia for almost 20 years, I would know if she was exaggerating, she wasn't and neither is it! The disclaimer is that the main character, Max, is not fat, as many of your may think. Max is in extremely good shape!! It's just that he lives in such a small space that he looks fat due to being filled from eating so much junk food, such as Listerias and Duff Doritos. Tuesday, December 22, 2012 Did you know that people who are fanatical about their diets are the ones making others fat? According to The Great Diet Conspiracy, an unfortunately named website, the organization leads the way in nutritional studies on weight loss. They have 24 people on their team. I'm not sure what The Great Diet Conspiracy has to do with making you fat, but lets just say that I don't think I'll be adding them to my reader panel. Like any supposedly legitimate, scientific study, there is an agenda behind it. One of the articles on the site is called, "Diets That Happen To Be Right For You". According to their works, the way to diet is three clear steps. Keep To Your Diet ForThe RestOfTheYear (as long as you're honest with yourself, which must be difficult for people that are fanatical about their diets.) Only eat healthy foods forTheRestOfTheWeek, and absolutely no food forTheRestOfTheDay! Come the weekend, eat a little...in theafternoon, then eat healthy all day on Saturday and Sunday. And being that it is The Great Diet Conspiracy, they offered some really clever tips to weigh less. The list included eating large, heavy meals, not drinking water before meals, and remembering that "Celebrity Slimmers Crumble". Let's just say that their assumptions don't follow Diet Society Reformed. Saturday, December 19, 2012 According to the Low Carb Cuisine's Diet Book and many, many other diet books, wheat, dairy and other veggies are the worst thing you can get while losing weight
