Download Shadowgun 2.Q: Why does my implicit request to Google (from a chromecast) always fail? I'm trying to test my chromecast application but it seems that it cannot get me the stream that I need. I want to download "todo-list" youtube videos as they come (already put in my home), then when there's a change, I want to update the list and then only watch when I get to actually see the item change. It works fine (download the file) as long as I start the Chromecast app once and then put in this chromecast id : Then, I can stream the video and it works normally. But, If I put in an other video url and then it doesn't work. Even If I put in a url that I know that it will work. It does that even if it's a youtube video. I don't know why it's not working. Can I give some more details (I'm sort of a noob at this). When I do a direct stream, it works for all of my vids. When I put in my chromecast id, it works for some vids. A: Chromecast DOES NOT support streaming from your own network. You need to use a browser to get to your own network and stream from there. I'll start by admitting that I'm no Kekai Sensen expert at all. Like most people who aren't pros at the genre, I've only seen the show once. However, I'm determined to level up on my buffs and buffs and buffs. Like, it's gonna take a lot of practice to do so. Not so long ago, I did a look at my Pokemon fandom history and I realized how much of my personality and style of play came from my love of Pokemon in the first place. So, what does that mean? It means that I'm
