Features: 2k Views per day All the achievements Google map YouTube playlist Steam Workshop Steam community A huge community of players Mission based gameplay Hours of Replay Many endings Contact Us: Twitter: Facebook: Twitch: Twitch plays: published:11 Jan 2018 views:5575 I hv been playing infinite children for just over a month and it's been a really fun experience, some of the people I've played have had the best time with it. I do wish they would add some changes to attract other players but I just love the game as it is away from adding anything new. It's got a very simple and intuitive gameplay that plays best on the PC. All of the achievements are unlocked effortlessly in my opinion, but if you do want to fast forward through the game you can do so. The funny thing is that there is no map in the game! This can be a little frustrating on the game being multiplayer focused in the fact that you can't see what's around you. The mini games are some of the best mini games that I've played around. I do want to get one issue out there about the steam overlay, once you get used to it. The overlay will randomly push out errors when it crashes and it's pretty much impossible to fix when it gets to the point of 0fps. With this game playing on the computer and console is where you'll experience the issues most. I hv only experienced one crash with the game. The game ran smoothly on my PC and the game ran fine on my ps3, even with the steam overlay turned on. During my gameplay I've made it to the 12th generation. I've made it to the 10th as well but each time someone gets to 10 it rewards the whole game for me. As I mentioned before, I do want to get a bit of attention on changing the game so that it can be enjoyed by more players, but as it stands right now the game can't be a better experience when played

OneeChanbara: Boku no Hero Academia 2 is a sequel to OneeChanbara:Boku no Hero Academia, a fighting game developed by Falcom X that was released in Japan on September 21, 2019. Falcom X previously announced the game for a western release in November 2019. Character Balancing: The player can freely switch between male and female characters. The OneeChanbara 2: jiggy BGM: The game's visuals, as well as the music, employ a theme of "triumph of music" inspired by the reality where anime and music continue to grow in popularity. In addition to the theme song performed by Zard, the OneeChanbara 2 BGM features the song "Clap" performed by Suci. To introduce this stage, a special game play using two songs, three people, and three games was made. Highlights: Franchises OneeChanbara and Persona. Falcom X: 6 new characters, one more than the original OneeChanbara BGM: jiggy. Games: OneeChanbara: Boku no Hero Academia, RPG x BlaxBlastGames (BedTime Story III), and OneeChanbara: Boku no Hero Academia 2. Performance: The OneeChanbara 2 BGM: jiggy features a theme song performed by a well-known voice actor in one of the leading anime and game franchises of all time, Zard. The song was written by Kenta Onishi, who has worked on anime, OVA, and game scores for films and games in various series, including the live action Love Live! Sunshine!!. In addition, the song was arranged by Go Izuta, a well-known arranger in the anime industry. An arrangement was done in a style incorporating swing, soft jazz, and bossa nova, all to create a cheerful energy that matches the game's mood. The game's other music was created by Suci, a french singer who has been composing, arranging, and producing new wave music since 2005. "Clap" is a song that captures lightness and energy, and combines it with synthesizers to create a modern interpretation of the "happy song" that are sung in Japan for the New Year. "Clap" is a song suited to the theme song's context and the game's atmosphere. Story: The One
