A: Having a look at your install log, it appears you have installed more than one version of CyberGhost Vpn (sometimes called Freevpn) on your machine. It is looking for the older version. Try running sudo apt-get purge cyberghost-installer (and then the next time you run the CyberGhost installer, make sure to select the correct version and make it remove all traces of the old one). I've also noticed that in your /var/log/apt/history.log, you have a line for the 20.4.2020-12-07_20-40-01-42.apt-2.0.tar.gz file containing The software can not be found in the packages. I'd assume that's the older version of CyberGhost. So, to answer your question, you might need to remove that package as well. Q: how to prevent buffer overflow when using scanf function #include void main() { char str[20]; int a, b, c; printf("Enter the first number : "); scanf("%d",&a); printf("Enter the second number : "); scanf("%d",&b); printf("Enter the third number : "); scanf("%d",&c); printf("The sum is : %d ", a + b + c); } I want to make sure that the user does not enter a string as the input to the variables. i have written the above code but it doesn't show any error or warning when i compile the same A: There are several things that can be done to prevent buffer overflow. First, use something other than scanf to read the input. With C, scanf is just the wrong tool to use. Its behavior is defined, but it doesn't provide guarantees and is generally pretty poor. However, if you do go the scanf way, you need to use two things: An appropriate buffer for the input, the size of which you should decide before the scanf call. If the user does input more data than your buffer is intended to hold, scanf will overflow

To use a newline in a string I need to use the escape sequence: " String s = "A B C D"; But when I want to add a literal newline to a float, I can't use escape sequences: float f = 1; String s = "X\r " + "\r " + "Y\r "; System.out.println("f: " + f); System.out.println("s: " + s); This gives f: 1.000000 And this gives s: X \r Y\r Is there any way to just keep the newlines in the s string? A: You can use String#replaceAll String s = "X\r " + "Y\r "; s = s.replaceAll("\\r\ ", "\r "); System.out.println(s); // prints "X\r Y\r " A: Try this: float f = 1; String s = "X\r " + "\r " + "Y"; System.out.println("f: " + f); System.out.println("s: " + s); Q: Adding multiple textboxes to a form through c# What i am trying to
