1. With the image open in Photoshop, go to File > Open, or press Ctrl+O (+O). 2. Navigate to and open the image you want to manipulate, and then press Ctrl+I (+I) to import the image into Photoshop.

The image appears in the Photoshop workspace. You can see that the image in the background is a gradient filled-in background. 3. Go to Image > Adjustments > Levels.

4. Click the small triangle in the top-right corner of the dialog box to open the Levels dialog box, as shown in Figure 1-1.

The dialog box has a slider on the right that represents the `_levels_` of the image (for more information on levels, see Chapter 3). In this exercise, you'll increase the levels to apply more contrast to the image, which will make it easier to see the tattoo on the forearm. For this image, I have used the brush tool set to a light gray gradient, but you can use any of the tools (pen, brush, clone stamp, eraser, airbrush, and many others) to edit the image. You'll use the brush to get in and work on the forearm, and then switch tools once the area you want to work on is selected so that you don't remove the tattoo ink. I'll discuss each tool further in the section on that tool, but for now you can get the idea that each tool is simply a way to put ink on the canvas.

FIGURE 1-1: Open the Levels dialog box. When you increase the levels, you're increasing the contrast, which is more noticeable when you increase the `_brightness_` of the image. Also, because the thumbnail shows the original image, you can check that the values are the same as the image before increasing the Levels. Figure 1-2 shows the Levels dialog box with the levels increased from 0 to 200.

5. With the image still open in the background (so you can see it), click the triangular button in the Levels dialog box to apply the changes to the image.

After clicking OK, you can see that the black text on the right has become brighter than the original, and the tattoos and other images also seem more visible. The image has a lighter background, but some of the features on the skin have also become more visible because the image

Patency and long-term outcome of adjuvant transcatheter arterial chemoembolization after curative resection of hepatocellular carcinoma. To elucidate the factors affecting long-term outcome of adjuvant transcatheter arterial chemoembolization (TACE) after curative resection of hepatocellular carcinoma, 105 hepatocellular carcinoma patients who underwent curative resection with adjuvant TACE were studied. During mean follow-up of 52.7 +/- 27.2 months, liver failure developed in 8 of the 105 (7.6%) patients, and death occurred in 13 (12.4%). A recurrence of liver cancer developed in 60 patients (57.1%). Multivariate analysis indicated that the factors that influenced the development of liver failure were the number of TACE sessions ($P = 0.002$), the presence of more than three tumors ($P = 0.003$), and the presence of necrosis (P In early 2017, the biotechnology company CRISPR Therapeutics signed a five-year deal with the US Department

An antinuclear antibody-associated, diffuse myositis. We studied the histologic and electromyographic findings in a patient with an antinuclear antibody (ANA) titer of 1:20,000 and a clinical myopathy that was confined to a diffuse myositis. A muscle biopsy specimen showed a myopathic type of muscle degeneration, including fiber atrophy, myofibrillar disruption, and necrosis. There was no evidence of muscle necrosis and denervation. The presence of ANA, the presence of myofibrillar disruption, and the severe course of muscle weakness all led to the diagnosis of a myopathy. Recent studies of patients with diffuse myositis have demonstrated involvement of the extracellular matrix, especially muscle fibers that were too small to be definitively classified as necrotic. The muscle degeneration in our patient may have been mediated by cytotoxic immunologic mechanisms. Electronic music/rock duo from Glasgow, Scotland.
