Start your own club or join another. Compete with others to see who is the Best shot. Shooting Sports Gun Club is a Multiplayer version of the Game. You can have 12 players but the computer determines the player and Player count. When starting a game, only the map's L.A. is shown. It is just a map, nothing else. The L.A. section of the city is easy to shoot and shoot to your heart's content. Just make sure you do not accidentally shoot anyone who is not a player. SORT OF ALPHABETICAL and LET YOU MAKE THE DECISION TO SEE WHO WIN OR LOSE. * Shooter does not maintain a history of video and thus does not reveal who has shot where. * The map is static and not affected by the actual physics of the universe, as no gravitational forces are simulated. * No flying is allowed but players can change the terrain. * Shooting is all digital with no analog controls. * Time is tracked in real time, but an hour is simply gone when the match is done. * There is no health, no death, and no penalty for dying. Notes: * This game gives an uncompromised view on how casual shooters operate. All results are based only on match results and sometimes who you shoot. * The game does not own the rights for any real or imaginary stories or characters. Any and all Nintendo properties are purely copyright Nintendo. * This game is not associated with any newspaper, television channel, chain store, computer manufacturer, or other entity. * This game is not affiliated with any movie, television channel, or other entity. * All scripting is made by Shooter. * Every time you start a new game, it resets back to the basic map settings. * You can start the game with the original 12-player version of the game, but the computer simply chooses who's the player. * Go to the link below to download the multiplayer version of the game! By Aicokey Watch 379 Favourites 15 Comments 4K Views Part I --Revision by Code Geek-- Appearance: Harano has short hair, cut in the style typical of a female quartermaster. Emotion: Harano is filled with a fiery passion that has yet to ignite, unfulfilled expectations and long-forgotten dreams. Development: Harano's ancestors had been a seaborne trade guild for generations, but the last war between her country and the neighboring country, Ashita, had annihilated most of the trade routes and thereby had caused the guild to descend to this drab, underground sea of trade, as she did. Development: For as long as she remembered, Harano had been surrounded by all the top-notch merchants, businessmen, and other distinguished members of society. She was swindled by thieves, cheated by petty criminals, and plagued by thieving gangs at her frequent travels up and down the coasts in search of improved trade routes. Then one day, something unimaginable occurred: she was informed that one of her family's ancestors had, before the last war, penetrated the Nabi Empire as a spy. That a woman from the heart of the merchant guild thought that she could be a spy, that woman, was a disgrace upon the entire Shiou Company, and more than that, was something utterly unprecedented. For despite being the daughters of respectable merchants, for despite working for Shiou Company, and for despite the rigorous training for ladies that her father often wanted her to go through, that woman was the one and only half-blood, a servant, the lowest of low in Shiou Company for she was a full blooded one of the Nabi Empire. That woman was her ancestor; her great-grandmother, the very same woman whose blood boiled white-hot in her veins. For this reason, she had felt her ancestor's blood to burn through her veins as well. Since then, she had never forgotten the disdain in which Shiou Company held her great-grandmother, and she could not help but hate Shiou Company. When she joined Shiou Company, she swore to herself that as long as she was still alive, no matter where she was in the company, no matter what her position was, she would work with all her heart and with all her might in the interests of Shiou Company, for only that was the reason why she had
