Note In Chapter 16, you'll find some help for creating layers and using the Layers panel to create them. See page. After you select your preference from the color space dialog box, you're ready to create a new document. If you open the File Open dialog box, you'll see two sets of checkboxes: the first one asks whether the color space is _Adobe RGB_ or _Adobe CMYK_. If you choose _Adobe RGB_, Photoshop opens the dialog box shown in Figure 14-4, which applies the Adobe RGB color space to the color channels of your image. Figure 14-4. This dialog box allows you to set the profile of the image. Its color channels are set in the dialog box.

AdvertisementQ: Pair next element of pair I have a list of tuples. Each tuple has a value and a type. The type can be either int or double So for example, I would have (1, int), (2, double), (3, float). How do I pair each number with the type using a lambda function? Basically, I'm looking for the python equivalent of numpy.meshgrid. Say my list is: [(1, int), (2, int), (3, double), (4, double), (5, double)] and I want to pair the index and the type: [(1, 1), (1, 2), (2, 1), (2, 3), (3, 1), (3, 4), (4, 1), (4, 5), (5, 1), (5, 5)] A: This is one way to do it: from itertools import izip data = [(1, int), (2, int), (3, int), (4, double), (5, double)] print list(izip(*[(i, j) for i, j in zip(range(len(data[0])), data)])) 388ed7b0c7

She said her daughter was raped by a woman but her family did not report it. She said when her daughter became pregnant, doctors told her it could cause a miscarriage or death of the mother and the baby would be taken away by the authorities. "I was scared," she said. "I was more scared about her not having the child because that could have caused a problem." At 26 weeks pregnant, Lassinda, 34, gave birth to a healthy son in hospital. She said her daughter gave birth at night. She was not able to see her son. Lassinda said she was also robbed when her daughter went into labour at home and fell on the floor. She said: "I was angry and I thought, 'If I had given birth in the hospital it would have been easier, it would have been a quicker process and I wouldn't have had any problems'. "She's not even getting a free "cash card". She's not getting a car as she's using mine, how am I supposed to look after her if I'm poor?" The SAPS has confirmed that mother and baby were OK.

However, both mother and baby were notified that no paternity tests could be done because of the circumstances. Lassinda said when the woman was eventually arrested, her family were taken in for questioning. She said: "I was actually very scared and I spoke to her family because my family know her and we are related. "I told her family that I was not going to be saying anything unless she was convicted. After she was convicted, I told them. "I felt like I had done a great thing, because she needed to be punished, but it was too late." Lassinda said she and her son are still not being supported by anyone. She said: "Everyone that's related to this woman is in trouble, I'm not even having support. I don't even know where she goes to jail." Lassinda said the woman does not have any children and was driven to leave the home for a "better life" after the incident.Q: Pass function result to finally Suppose you are writing a function that checks for a condition within a loop. What's New in the Photoshop CC 2015 Version 16?

George Hoagland: Under a cap of $50M, Salvador Perez had a nice year For the first time since 2011, Salvador Perez isn't in the starting lineup anymore. But he's still wearing that Kansas City Royals uniform, so he's still playing in his first year with the team he grew up rooting for. You could understand why the man nicknamed "Fast Pitch" might be a little bitter, but he's almost been the best player on a team that's the opposite of fast. This week, the 26-year-old spent some time with Kansas City Star columnist George Vradenburg, going over how he's feeling about 2018. Vradenburg:

Royals were supposed to be a hopeless mess, but their season has been surprisingly good. Were there any expectations of winning more than 45 games, maybe getting back into contention? Perez: "No, never. We were thinking no playoffs, just get to the postseason, win a series or get into the playoffs. We want to win the World Series. Never expected to win this many games." Vradenburg: You have 10 years in the big leagues. How would you rate Kansas City's farm system in comparison with other organizations? Perez: "We have been doing really good lately. We are building a great team. I think we have the most potential in the minor leagues. We have young guys that can develop in our organization. We can make it really good soon." Vradenburg: Royals have been a decent source of international free agents over the last five years. Perez: "We have a lot of Latin players in the organization. I think we have about 20 Latin players." Vradenburg: Since the team's success is based on more than just pitching, how do you feel about the Royals' position players and special teams this year? Perez: "We are really solid in all phases. We are having good offense. We have a lot of speed and a lot of power hitters. The pitchers are pitching really well, and the defense is playing really good." Vradenburg: KC traded Lorenzo Cain to the Giants. Your buddy

Alex Gordon is the center of attention these days. How do you handle the attention? Perez: "When you have a family and you are good friends with guys, you are going to have that attention on
