What's new in Puzzle: Fire Sticks:

is now available. I'm talking about the picture here. It's not a card board cut-out, it's a digital terrain map. I made it a couple days ago for a game I'm currently planning. Removing the Tru-Tracs Bridge from the Rhine Crossing lets the map fit a smaller (5x5) game box. That's just one of the nice things that the box does. You can download a sample, or you can grab it here. Here are some thoughts on the scenarios in this pack. If you have played this area in a 4x4 game, you will note quite a few changes. If you're a 4x4 aficionado, it should be worth playing the package twice; once using the original playing board, and then again with the revised one. I will probably do that at some point here and there, because a great game is six times better if you can interpret your own results. NEC Scenario Details: The scenario takes place in general neighborhood area, north of the NE corridor from Philadelphia to New York City. If you zoom in, you'll see most buildings are about 200-500 feet long, from one side to the other. There are state buildings, borough government buildings and quarter sized (20-100 feet long) buildings scattered around. The corridors include river crossings, locks, and other mid-level crossings. Overall, I like how it turned out. I've incorporated some improvements I've learned with this scenario in the past. I always seem to forget things that I know well and it adds a considerable amount of stress to gameplay. I also made changes to the smoke that I'd learned on the FunSet scenarios. In this scenario, I think smoke makes the player's position hard to discern very quickly and forces a reevaluation of initiative. I've tried the games I've played so far without smoke, and it's still an issue. I'm not sure if there's a perfect configuration, and this is how I've found it. I may or may not retry without smoke in the future, but I don't want to trash talk it too much, since I don't want the scenarios to feel gimmicky. Overall, the game results have been improved with the changes I made. The columns on the western and eastern sides of the board were just made by accident. The map was designed to be a rectangle and I couldn't remember how the color flow in the corners stopped
