More specifically, embodiments of the present disclosure relate to methods and apparatus for treating an animal prior to the production of meat products from the animal. At least some known meat processing plants process a large number of animals on a daily basis. Some known meat processing plants use a mechanical drive system or a large hydraulic drive system to move the animals between one or more pens and an area for processing. This mechanical drive system or hydraulic drive system may move or move an entire drive pen at one time. For example, a mechanical drive system may pull a drive pen through a process line. The process line is connected to the drive pen such that the animals are able to move from one pen to the process line. The mechanical drive system may move a drive pen at a rate of one pen every one or two seconds. This mechanical drive system may move several hundred to several thousand animals per hour. Further, the mechanical drive system may move several hundred to several thousand animals per day. Similarly, a large hydraulic drive system may be used to

The lamina cribrosa, optic nerve and choroid are the components of the optic nerve of the monkeys. The shape of the anterior and posterior part of the orbit and the eyeball are similar to those of the man. The eyeball of the monkey shows a certain angle of the muscle in the superior part of the orbit, and has a prominence of the muscle near the optic nerve. It is difficult to find an angle for the eyeball in the medial and lateral parts of the orbit. The optic nerve fibers are very thin, and they are distributed evenly. The choroid between the optic nerve and the retina is uniform. The proportion of the circumference of the choroid to the circumference of the eyeball decreases as the distance from the optic disk increases. Each choroid is very thin and wide and is very susceptible to damage by reflected rays of the laser beam during photocoagulation.Posts Tagged "pearl farming" There is a glorious day to be enjoyed in the city of Stone. Through a comprehensive eye-opening tour of the city, the Five Friends also visit two pearl farms, and learn about how this luxury item is made. The first pearl farm, Zhaoyan Pearl Farm, is located at the end of the Zhonglun Fishing Port and is one of the few pearl farms located outside the Pearl River Delta. Pearl farming began in Qin Shi Huang's era, when the king realized that art of pearl culture was of great value. In Zhaoyan's case, it is located on a small bay along the lake-like water source, which is ideally suited for the growth and breeding of pearls. S.T.A.R, a.k.a. Stone River Pearls, is one of the oldest pearl farms in China. It is the main outlet for the second farm of the same name, S.T.A.R. Pearls, which was founded in 2006. It is also one of the largest pearl farms. However, the pearl production of S.T.A.R. is limited to one type of cultured pearl. The second farm of S.T.A.R. Pearls is the first pearl farm
