Six patients with septicemia were found to have leukocytic intravascular schistocytes within the circulating leukocytes. Intravascular schistocytes were only observed in patients with an overwhelming infection. The hemorrhagic diathesis has occurred in patients who had either a mild infection that resolved or patients who had an infection with organisms which were sensitive to gamma-radiation. The data suggest that the schistocyte formation is an incidental and nonspecific change, the cause of which cannot be determined with certainty.Le Foulée Le Foulée (probably derived from the Norman word lacia meaning a small point) is a village and suburb in the northern part of the city of Lyon in Rhône, France. Le Foulée is one of the important neighborhoods located along the Rhône's ring road and is bordered by the main urban axis of the city of Lyon and by the main commercial hub of its district, the 10th arrondissement. It is the closest French neighborhood to the Saint-Jean suburb, and as such is one of the most bustling suburban areas in Lyon. History Le Foulée was founded in 1846 on the grounds of the 3rd Infantry Regiment's barracks in the small town of Belley. The settlement's geography was advantageous: Placed atop a rocky outcrop at the foot of a steep hill, the settlement provided the soldiers and their families with fresh air and breathable air and the location of a small, protected retreat.
