[6] The relevant portions of the Rules of Practice for Trials before the National Labor Relations Board, 29 CFR § 101.10(f), provide: (f) The presiding trial examiner shall not permit irrelevant matter or argument to be presented to the hearing officer, or the hearing officer shall not permit irrelevant argument to be made to the trial examiner. (1) The trial examiner shall restrict irrelevant argument to issues presented by the pleadings in such a manner that the court shall not be compelled to consider it. (2) The hearing officer shall, at any time before the hearing, correct any argument made to him by the respondent or on his behalf. The examiner shall not assume the role of prosecutor or defense counsel. The hearing examiner shall conduct the hearing in an impartial manner so as to insure due process of law. (3) The presiding trial examiner shall not inquire into the credibility of the witnesses or the weight of the evidence. At all times, he shall maintain an attitude of impartiality. He shall exercise an independent judgment in the conduct of the hearing and shall conduct it in such a manner that the appellant is accorded a full and fair hearing. [7] During the hearing, the Board's lawyer, in response to a question by the trial examiner, suggested that the respondent's attorney might object to his conduct as an "attorney running a practice" if he had such a problem. The board's attorney suggested this was an improper basis for such a belief and asked that a "particularized" objection be filed which might be the basis for a Board exception. The respondent's lawyer took no objection to the trial examiner's conduct; and in his exceptions to the Board's decision, in effect, he either conceded that the trial examiner's conduct was not improper or he sought review under
