Zorg doesn't know how to do a lot of things. He doesn't really know how to walk. He has only just learned how to throw a punch, and only recently learned how to jump. But he knows how to fight. Zorg knows that you can't beat someone with words, and that if he is not typing fast, he is going to lose. One day, Zorg will find out what it takes to win. Story: The world is in peril. That's when Zorg, an out of it barbarian, starts his quest to fight his way through the kingdom of Plantagetik, to stop evil and save his people. Along the way he encounters swarms of enemies, traps, puzzles,... and ultimately a princess. But will she be able to save the world? So what is it? Zorg is a game in which you must type the commands and select options as fast as possible to win. You can defeat your enemies by hitting them and dropping their items. There are also traps in the level that you can avoid or trigger by hitting them. The faster you type, the faster you win. - Play levels online against thousands of other players around the world. - Beat your best time and earn points for that in a leaderboard. - If you like to practice, play survival mode against the computer. It's endless and no matter how many mistakes you make you'll be able to get back to the last checkpoint. - You can even add mods that change some game mechanics or extend the time limit. - Type text at a maximum speed (or copy and paste) to beat enemies, trigger traps and solve puzzles. - Since Zorg's kingdom is procedurally generated each time you play a new game, there are always new types of traps and enemies. - You are limited by your typing speed: The faster you type, the more enemies you can defeat. - On the last level there is a sword and a scepter, a princess and a final boss. Defeat the final boss and he'll give you the scepter, so you can use it to defeat the bosses that come after. - Save the princess, that's right. Her life will depend on it. If she dies, you lose. - The game also features cutscenes: The art is drawn in-engine. - Different skins and music for each language. - Even more levels are planned
