Starting with Photoshop

Installing Photoshop is easy, but it's not the type of software that you buy. Photoshop is a much more powerful tool than is needed for even the most capable photographers. And it's also very expensive.

Instead, you get a trial version of Photoshop when you purchase your Mac or PC (or buy a Mac or PC with Photoshop already installed).

This trial version is fully functional for 30 days, but the software expires after that. You don't have to pay any money until that time expires. When the trial version expires, you need to purchase a registered copy of the software. You can get a registered version any time you want, either in the Mac App Store or in the Adobe website. Here's the process: 1. **Go to** www.adobe.com **and click the Photoshop button to see a list of programs.** ** You can buy on the Adobe website; as shown in Figure 2-5, an Adobe representative is explaining the trial and registered versions and how to buy. 2. **If you use a credit or debit card, skip to Step 3; otherwise, click the Buy button for a call-up window where you can fill in your contact information and make your purchase.** You need to select a program, quantity, payment method, and shipping method. After you pay, you're prompted to download the program immediately. 3.

**Download the program, install it (if the Mac App Store is your payment method), and you can launch Photoshop.****

4. **If you don't need any of the functions of Photoshop at first, you can just leave the program running.** As a side note, you're not restricted to a 30-day trial; you can also purchase a lifetime license to Photoshop or Photoshop Elements. FIGURE 2-5: Click the Photoshop button on the Adobe website to see a listing

Photoshop CS6 Elements CS6 Photoshop CC 1. How to Make Black-and-White Images

You'll use this tool to make black and white images. With this tool, you can quickly convert your photo into black and white images. So, let's start this Photoshop tutorial. Step 1: Start Photoshop and Open the Image Open your image in Photoshop. It should be an 800×800 image. Step 2: Open Black and White Filter Click on Filter -> Blur -> Gaussian Blur. After you apply the Gaussian Blur, you'll see the black-and-white preview. Step 3: Increase and Decrease the Blur Amount Open the Blur Amount slider. You'll find it in the upper-left corner of the image. It's next to the Hue slider. Note: In Photoshop

---

Elements, the standard Blur is Gaussian Blur. The reason we're increasing and decreasing the blur is to make the picture look more professional. Step 4:

Q: How do I generate an HTTP Response based on the return value of a PHP script? I want to include a PHP script in my REST service. If the return value of that script is good, I want to return a HTTP response with a code of 200. If the return value is bad, I want to return an HTTP error response, with the code set to 404. How do I do this, and can I do it inside a REST service?

(Where my REST service would just be a GET request)?

A: First of all, you need to have a complete example of PHP script that returns an HTTP status. If you don't have that yet, here's a simpler example: function

simple_foo() { $answer = rand(1, 5); echo "Answer: $answer"; return $answer; } $req = simple_foo(); if ($req
>= 3) { // good } else { // bad }

The script will return a random number between 1 and 5 for the answer. But you can also set the $answer to an actual value, like in this other example: function my_custom_simple_foo($answer = 3) { $answer = rand(1, 5); echo "Answer: $answer"; return $answer; } $req = my_custom_simple_foo(); if ($req >= 3) { // good } else { // bad } [Cervical lymph node response in patients with breast cancer. of inflammatory response in metastatic lymph nodes in patients with invasive breast cancer has not been evaluated in detail. This study was performed to evaluate the value of the histopathologic response criteria. Two hundred and thirty-five lymph nodes from 52 patients with breast cancer were resected. The histopathologic response criteria (modified Coombes' System) were applied, and cytokeratin staining was performed for the presence of tumor cells. Moreover, the incidence of a K-ras mutation, as an indicator of local carcinoma, was evaluated using polymerase chain reaction. The histopathologic response criteria correlated Political discussion and ranting, premised upon the fact that even a stopped clock is right twice a day. Friday, May 17, 2011 One big monolithic thing Rach tells me that, upon reading my post, he wanted to reach out and shake me by the shoulders. In a blog post announcing the results of the California primary election, KPIX, a local TV news station in San Francisco, the lead story was the California recall election results, which they say have Republican Rick Scott projected to win the U.S. Senate seat now occupied by Democrat Barbara Boxer. Rach joined me to discuss this, and we made the following observations about the Boxer race and this particular version of the election returns: That it appears to have been an incredibly low turnout election. This is supposed to be the "low-turnout" state, even more so than a year from now, when the White House will be at stake. But this was the only U.S. Senate primary on this date that didn't appear to have a lot of turnout. One might say that this was a Republican victory. That's not really the way to look at it. The election returns didn't reflect that. The Republican gains in the state of California came because conservatives simply gained a majority of seats in the state legislature and a plurality in Congress. And that is not reflective of the Republican voter. The "anti-establishment" thing is overplayed. The Republicans have nominated the only person in the race who was not an activist for the Tea Party. We also note that their exit polling data also shows that the vast majority of the Republican primary voters didn't want to see Mitt Romney as their nominee. 4 comments: You are spot-on about the low turnout. The election was so absurd I think people don't want to have anything to do with it. Even the Green Party put up a candidate. That was unprecedented. I'd be really surprised if turnout in a presidential race fell to historic lows in this state, but I could be wrong about that. They even flip-flopped on their damn count. So they went from having a cluster of counties with an outlier vote count, to the single most outlier county dominating the result, to Republican Scott coming out on top. The speculation is that Obama won those counties by under 50%, so they gave Scott the win out of spite. A fine line

---

---
