V-Ray (VRay) is a rendering software that runs on Windows and Mac systems and.Q: Saving content of a multi-channel google map to a Google Drive In order to try a small proof of concept I've been working on an app where I save a multi-channel Google map to a Google Drive, but I'm hitting a brick wall. Here's an abbreviated version of what I'm trying to do: if (google.script.run.runWithMapPreview(mapPreviewChannels)) { File drivetItem = DocumentApp.getFolderById(""); drivetItem.addFile(newDriveContents); } The result I'm getting is the file being uploaded, but it's not saving the content of the map preview. Here's an example of what I'm getting (notice that the two images are identical and cannot be changed): If I change the type of "newDriveContents" from 'Blob' to 'Webapp', I get a 404 error that says "This App does not have a short name". Any advice on how to accomplish what I'm trying to do? A: See a couple of things in your code: You are only passing a single image to File#addFile(). In other words, there's no file to be added. Therefore the 404 error. You are getting an error because the file name must match the contentName. In other words, a blox with the title Google Maps API does not have a contentName. Check the contentType. You can name it Google Maps Service or mapPreview. Try var drivetItem = DocumentApp.getFolderById("").createFile(); instead of var drivetItem = DocumentApp.getFolderById(""); drivetItem.addFile(newDriveContents); References InsertFile Note that
