Roblox is an online game platform and game creation system developed by Roblox Corporation that allows users to program games and play games created by other users. Created by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel in 2004 and released in 2006, the platform hosts user-created games of multiple genres coded in the programming language Lua. For most of Roblox's history, it was relatively small, both as a platform and a company. Roblox began to grow rapidly in the second half of the 2010s, and this growth has been accelerated by the COVID-19 pandemic. The platform is used by users to build their own games. They then play those games on the website or with friends on the mobile app. The website is available in many languages (e.g., English, Japanese, Mandarin, Spanish, German, Portuguese, French, Korean, Simplified Chinese, Traditional Chinese, Russian, Portuguese Brazil, Italian Brazil) and allows users to translate the game to other languages. In May 2016, Roblox launched an early access program for moddable games, where developers could gain access to the game platform before it was opened to the public. In July 2017, Roblox launched the LUX platform, a Mac/PC version of the website that could be installed by developers and played using the Roblox Game Framework (RGF). Starting in mid-2018, Roblox began to release new changes with each new game update. These changes include new animations, audio, costumes, games, and environments. Roblox also introduced a new player system in August 2018 that allows players to communicate with each other and participate in communities. In July 2019, Roblox released two new updates, introducing the powerups system and the multiplayer server system, both of which power how players interact with each other. These changes influenced the way players in games can pass information to each other during gameplay. The player experience has shifted more toward the Action RPG genre in the past five years, and games in this genre typically incorporate new features and changes every year. Game types: Single Player (aka Non-Multicpu Player) This type of player plays the game alone without any other players. These games have one location, and the user plays the game by themselves. Multiplayer This type of player plays the game with others asynchronously, usually with one or more different game types. Co-op This type of player plays the game with others synchronously
