In normal adult mammals, liver regeneration after partial hepatectomy is an annual event regulated by the endocrine and paracrine hepatokines: epidermal growth factor (EGF) and transforming growth factor-alpha (TGF-alpha). In contrast, the liver of patients with chronic liver disease is a virtual fortress, and liver regeneration is impaired. Although hepatokines play crucial roles in the initiation of liver regeneration, it is unclear whether those factors regulate liver regeneration after chronic injury. Human hepatocyte growth factor (HGF) was recently identified as a hepatokine that stimulates liver regeneration via a Smad3-dependent
