World Wide Web.The effect of alumina support on the catalytic performance of TiNiP and TiNiP-CeO<sub>2</sub> catalysts in the gasification of biomass-derived carbon. TiNiP-CeO<sub>2</sub> catalysts supported on a commercial alumina sorbent were prepared for the first time and their catalytic performances were evaluated in a fixed-bed reactor in the gasification of biomass-derived carbon (BDC). The effects of alumina sorbent type (alumina/orthophosphate or alumina/gibbsite) and temperature (400-900 °C) on the catalytic behaviour and activity of the TiNiP catalysts were investigated. It was observed that the catalytic activity for all the catalysts increased with temperature and reached a maximum at 800 °C, with the best result for the catalysts supported on alumina-based sorbents. The maximum activity was observed at 800 °C for the catalysts with a low Si/P molar ratio (0.08). After that, a decrease in the activity was observed for the catalysts with Si/P ratios above 0.1. The best result was obtained for the alumina/orthophosphate sorbent at 800 °C with a Si/P molar ratio below 0.1. The activity of the catalysts slightly decreased with an increase in the Si/P molar ratio. The study of the active phase and structure of the catalysts indicated the presence of a mixed oxide phase ( 6d1f23a050
