Application of an analytical sedimentation equilibrium method for the determination of microsomal cytochrome b5 in several tissues. The application of an analytical equilibrium method for the purification of cytochrome b5 from rat and rabbit liver microsomes and rat hepatocytes is described. Chromatographic resolution was achieved by separation on Blue Sepharose CL-6B, and determination of the amount of specific cytochrome b5 (b5) was performed by the difference in the absorbance at 525 and 460 nm. For rat liver microsomes, the mean value of b5 content was 2.1 nmol/mg protein. The purity of the protein preparation was demonstrated by SDS-polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis. Using this technique, b5 was detected in rat hepatocytes in a concentration of 2.5 nmol/10(6) cells.
