in one of his hairstyles. At first, the owners refused to make the change, but after a few minutes, they gave in. "We couldn't do it because I was black," he said. "Plus, the customer had a crew cut. She said, 'We're too busy. You have to go somewhere else.'" The incident took place in the Hair Wave Day Spa in the Bay View neighborhood. The owner refused to listen to Byrd's explanation, told him he was rude, and asked for the $100 he owed for her services. The owners said they'd call the police, but this did not happen. Burnt by the sun, flailing arms, and heavy bags on your legs. A lifetime of sitting in front of a computer, or worse, at a desk pushing a keyboard. Eating too much. And, of course, the excess weight. If you are 50 or older, you are already sporting a dangerous combination of these factors. To try and help stave off geriatric-style problems, exercise is the first defense. In fact, research shows that simple activities like walking the dog or pushing a shopping cart can prevent many other disorders. Studies have shown that those who walk three or more times a week can:

- avoid or delay the effects of heart disease
- retain their memory for years longer
- have a 50 percent better chance of living to 100, in comparison to those who sit all day
- have a 75 percent better chance of living to 95 than those who sit all day. Jockey Bettencourt used to be a champion cyclist. Now, with one eye still blind and one eye severely damaged by a cycling accident, he is the world's highest-paid sportswoman. But Bettencourt's story is not as remarkable as the blind horse that followed him home. "I never expected to get famous because I've seen so many athletes in this country and I feel like they're all the same," Bettencourt told ABCNEWS.com. He attributed his success to his perseverance, the help of a mentor and his athletic prowess. "The main reason I never give up is because c6a93da74d
